

THE ECLIPSE OF GERMANY'S LAST PLACE IN THE SUN

Scenes from Kamerun, in what was German Southwest Africa. After serving for thirty years as the cornerstone for Teutonic colonial aspirations, this last province has now been captured by the Allied forces, leaving Germany with no further work for her elaborate staff of colonial governors. These pictures were taken during the German occupation. International.

The German influence on the natives of Africa results in a perfectly natural beach-party adopting military formation under the armed command of an officer

An African boy, who has been appointed an "ober," impressing on his underlings that "aus, ausser, bei, mit, etc.," take the dative

His Excellency, the German Governor, favors the natives with a few passages from Nietzsche

If the native boys in a German colony were good, when they grew up they were allowed to carry a gun and do the goose-step.

It really makes little difference to these artisans who owns their country so long as they have plenty of gourds

Whatever Major Hans Dominik did, it was enough to get him a statue in an African jungle, erected, no doubt, by the loving natives